

THE ROSE CENTER at Yale University
A New University Police and Community Center

William Rawn Associates, Architects, Inc., Boston, MA

THE ROSE CENTER AT YALE UNIVERSITY A New University Police Station and Community Center

This new Police Station and Community Center is the first project in an important new campus sector linking Yale's Central Campus and Science Hill. Designed to unite these two sectors, the building acts as a beacon of security for both the New Haven Community and Yale University that places continually manned police functions at the ground floor to provide 24 hour "eyes on the street." Community meeting spaces and lobbies combine with these functions to create a continuous glass wall at the public edges of the building, a physical representation of the ideas of "community policing" embraced by the department.

HONORS AND AWARDS

- 2006 Merit Award, New England Chapter, AIA
- 2006 Honor Award, Connecticut Chapter, AIA
- 2006 Honor Award, Boston Society of Architects

CONNECTING CAMPUS AND COMMUNITY

A NEW PARADIGM FOR A POLICE FACILITY: Communications Room Facing Street

In contrast to typical police station planning where the communications room is located in a “bunker,” often in the basement, the Communications Room is located prominently on the front of the station, providing 24-hour “Eyes on the Street” surveillance of main campus paths and roadways.

Communications Room

SHARED FACILITY: Campus Police Station and Community Center

The Community Center, with a 90-seat multi-purpose Community Room and a large Computer Training Classroom, welcomes the local community into the police facility.

SHARED ENTRY:

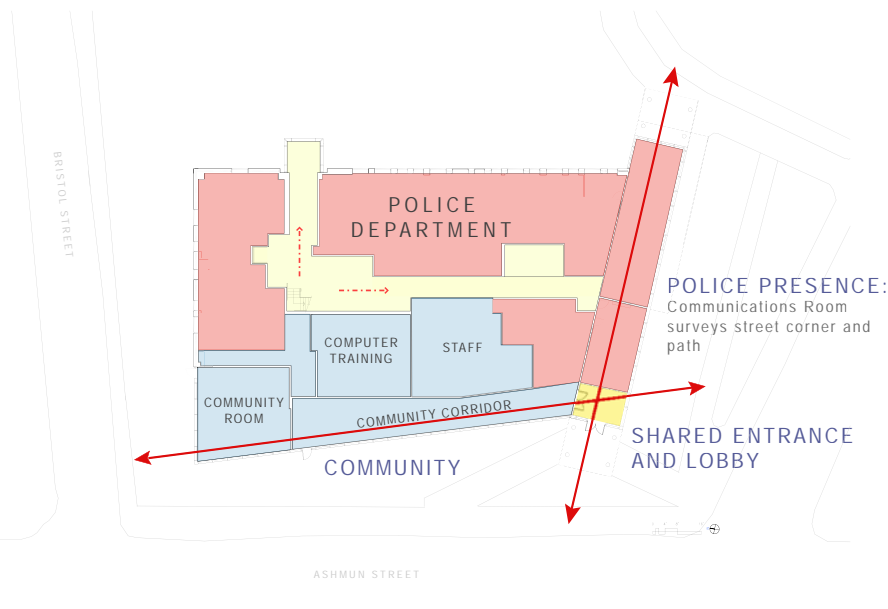

The Police Department and the Community Center share a single entry, celebrating the strong and lasting connection between the two facilities. With views to the University and surrounding community, the shared entry represents the University’s efforts to reach out to the surrounding community.

Community Room

Computer Training Room

GROUND FLOOR PLAN

- Police Spaces
- Community Spaces
- Circulation
- Shared Lobby / Entrance

Shared Entry

PROJECT FACTS

PROJECT NAME

The Rose Center at Yale University

PROJECT LOCATION

New Haven, CT

SIZE

38,204 gsf

USES

University Police Station and Community Center

OWNER

Yale University, New Haven, CT

